Collaboration partners must include organizations with nurse home visitation, healthy marriage, and responsible fatherhood experience and expertise. Other partners could include child welfare organizations and child abuse prevention programs. An experienced nurse home visitation program is an essential collaborative partner, but doesn't need to be the lead applicant.

Award Range/Funding Period: Maximum of $400,000 per 12-month budget period, for a project period of 60 months.

Summary: The purpose of activities funded under this program announcement is to prevent child abuse and neglect by providing nurse home visitation services and by providing or referring parents who would benefit from them to healthy marriage and responsible fatherhood services. Funded programs will employ strong partnerships with child abuse prevention, child welfare, family support, and other disciplines to implement and evaluate this combination of services. Families who need them should also receive services to address substance abuse, mental health, and family violence issues.

Nurse home visitation programs funded under this program announcement will be based on models which have been proven successful in preventing child abuse and neglect. Funded programs will conduct comprehensive family assessments, build on family strengths, address the most critical risk factors for abuse or neglect, deliver culturally competent services or arrange for appropriate supports, focus on positive parent-child and parent-parent interaction, educate families on child development, and provide or refer parents who would benefit from them to healthy marriage and responsible fatherhood services. These demonstration projects will further explore the connection between intact families and/or active fathers and the occurrence of child abuse and neglect. The programs must institute nurse home visits and services during pregnancy or at birth and provide services of sufficient duration to lower the incidence of child abuse and neglect. Due Date: 7-2-07
