Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Grant Name: Building Healthy Teen Relationships

Funder: Robert Wood Johnson Foundation

Eligibility: Applicants must either be a tax-exempt organization under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code or a tribal group recognized by the U.S. federal government or; a public entity such as a unit of government or school board. Funded projects must consist of a partnership comprised of one lead agency along with one to three partnering organizations that have distinct roles in implementing the components of the initiative. The organizations making up the core partnership must have a combined expertise and demonstrated capacity in all four areas: 1. Ability to mobilize and develop leadership among young people; 2. Knowledge and capacity to address and prevent dating and sexual violence; 3. Knowledge and capacity to reinforce positive social norms and address policy in the community; 4. Demonstration of work in at least one of the four components and dedicated resources in place to expand that work.

Award Range/Funding Period: Up to $250,000 per year for a project period of 48 months.

Summary: Preventing intimate partner violence (IPV) begins with ensuring that young people's first relationships are healthy ones. IPV is an important determinant of health and well-being and often begins in adolescence with conflict in relationships. The Building Healthy Teen Relationships program will support the creation and evaluation of comprehensive community-based models of prevention that aim to decrease relationship violence and increase positive, protective relationship skills.

Due Date: Online registration: 3/17/08; brief proposals due 4/16/08. The application is online.
